The city remembrancer: being historical narratives of the great plague at London, 1665; great fire, 1666; and great storm, 1703. To which are added, observations and reflections on the plague in general; considered in a religious, philosophical, and physical view: with historical accounts of the most memorable plagues, fires, and hurricanes. The whole compiled from the curious and authentic papers of the late very learned Dr. Harvey, his Majesty's physician to the Tower of London. In two volumes ... London: Printed

London : Printed for T. Evans...and Richardson

2 v. (318; 360, [12] p.) ; 18 cm.

5th edition; reprint (without illus.) of "The fourth edition", London, D. Midwinter, 1741, in which the translation of Exquemelin differed from that of the earlier editions, 1684 et. seq.

The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the various methods which have been proposed for the determination of the rate of reaction between a solid and a liquid. It is shown that the most reliable method is that of measuring the change in the weight of the solid as the reaction proceeds. This method is applicable to all cases in which the solid is insoluble in the liquid, and it is the only method which gives a direct measure of the rate of reaction. The other methods, such as the measurement of the volume of gas evolved, or the change in the refractive index of the liquid, are only applicable to special cases.
 The second part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the factors which influence the rate of reaction between a solid and a liquid. It is shown that the rate of reaction is influenced by the nature of the solid, the nature of the liquid, the temperature, and the surface area of the solid. The rate of reaction is generally increased by increasing the temperature, and by increasing the surface area of the solid. The rate of reaction is also influenced by the nature of the solid and the nature of the liquid. The rate of reaction is generally increased by using a more reactive solid, and by using a more reactive liquid.

Figure 1. The effect of the concentration of the Agrobacterium suspension on the transformation efficiency of Agrobacterium strains. The number of transformed cells was determined by the number of colonies obtained on the selective medium. The results are the mean of three independent experiments. Error bars represent the standard deviation.

10. The Commission has also received information from the Government of the United States of America, that the United States has been providing military assistance to the Government of the United States of America, in the form of arms, ammunition, and other military equipment, for the purpose of enabling the Government of the United States of America to maintain its military forces in the United States of America.
